Proposal Summary
We propose to create a new Graduate Certificate in Latin American and Caribbean Studies (LACS) at the University of Maryland. It will be administered by the Latin American Studies Center (LASC), which, in a separate administrative action, we will be proposing to have renamed the Latin American and Caribbean Studies Center. Students enrolled in the Latin American and Caribbean Studies Graduate Certificate program will engage in an interdisciplinary approach to scholarship and teaching that facilitates, across a range of disciplines, the study of the cultures, histories, and literatures, as well as the political, economic and governmental systems of Latin America and the Caribbean. By incorporating concentrations in research praxis and experiential learning, the program is intended to serve both students who wish to pursue an academic career in Latin American and Caribbean studies and students who wish to pursue a non-academic career in the private, not-for-profit, or government sectors. Regardless of their professional goals, students completing the program will be able to appreciate, theorize, and compare the diverse cultures of Latin America and the Caribbean in their linguistic, cultural, and social dimensions as they emerged from diverse pre-colonial, colonial, and post-colonial histories, as well as be able to consider contemporary realities of Latin America and the Caribbean from informed regional and international perspectives.

Program and Catalog Information

Provide the catalog description of the proposed program. As part of the description, please indicate any areas of concentration or specializations that will be offered.

The Graduate Certificate program in Latin American and Caribbean Studies is a cross-collegial interdisciplinary program focusing on the diverse cultures, histories, and literatures, as well as the political, economic and governmental systems of Latin America and the Caribbean. The program is intended to serve both students who wish to pursue an academic career in Latin American and Caribbean studies and students who wish to pursue a non-academic career in the private, not-for-profit, or government sectors. Students enroll in a total of 12 credits of coursework, 9 of which must fulfill the core requirements and 3 of which will derive from elective coursework selected from a variety of courses and disciplines throughout the university. All Certificate students are required to take one 3-credit introductory course (LACS608) and a 1-credit colloquium (LACS648) over the course of three semesters (for a total of 3 credits). The Colloquium is open to interested faculty and students in all disciplines, as well as invited visiting scholars and is aimed at interrogating annually designated themes relating to Latin America and the Caribbean. The remaining 3 of the 9 core credits are taken in one or a combination of two praxis concentrations—praxis in research and praxis experiential learning. The Graduate Certificate further establishes LASC as a key center for research, academic presentations, student and faculty conferences, co-curricular cultural events, graduate mentorship, and work both theoretical and practical on Latin America and the Caribbean.

Total Credits 12

1. The colloquium is a one-credit course taken over three semesters for a total of three credits.
2. An elective with content in Latin American and the Caribbean may be taken in any UMD department. Consult the program for a list of pre-approved courses. Courses not on the pre-approved list may be used with approval of the director. 400-level courses may be taken with additional assignments.

LANGUAGE REQUIREMENT
In addition to English, students must demonstrate advanced proficiency in one of the other languages of the Americas: indigenous languages, a creolized language such as Haitian Creole, colonial languages -Spanish, Portuguese, French - or other language considered by the program administration to be relevant to study of Latin America and the Caribbean. Proficiency may be certified through a language translation exam administered by an affiliate faculty member or through advanced-level coursework in the student’s indicated language. If done through coursework, students must have a grade of “B-” or better in an advanced-level course. (Students who receive a grade lower than a “B-” may repeat the course).

Sample plan. Provide a term by term sample plan that shows how a hypothetical student would progress through the program to completion. It should be clear the length of time it will take for a typical student to graduate. For undergraduate programs, this should be the four-year plan.

Year 1:
Fall Semester:
- LACS608: Perspectives on Latin America and the Caribbean (3 credits)
- LACS648: Colloquium (1 credit)

Spring Semester:
- LACS648: Colloquium (1 credit)
- Elective (3 credits)

Year 2:
Fall semester:
- LACS648: Colloquium (1 credit)
- LACS688 or 689 (3 credits)

Courses do not have to be taken sequentially. LACS688/689 may be taken for 1-3 credits over one or semesters.

List the intended student learning outcomes. In an attachment, provide the plan for assessing these outcomes.

Learning Outcomes

Students will be able to demonstrate a solid knowledge of the histories, politics, and cultures of Latin America and the Caribbean.

Students will be able to demonstrate an understanding of the historical role and impact of colonialism and various colonial countries – French, Spanish, Portuguese, British, Dutch – in the shaping of Latin America and the Caribbean, as well as the role of colonial and imperial histories in the shaping of regional perceptions of self and society.

Students will be able to demonstrate their ability to conduct specific research on the history and culture of one Latin American or Caribbean country as well as a good knowledge of that country's positioning in the wider region.

Students will be able to demonstrate a good knowledge of current debates, issues, theoretical and philosophical perspectives interrogating the societies and cultures of Latin America and the Caribbean.

Students will be able to demonstrate their ability to apply their knowledge about Latin America and the Caribbean in the praxis of an original research project or of a professional experience in an organization with a special interest in Latin America and/or the Caribbean.

These outcomes will be measured through an assessment of both the student’s scholarly work and a required oral presentation at the Colloquium. Assessment of the presentation will be conducted once during the student's time in the three-semester Colloquium sequence, preferably in the student’s final semester. In addition to the oral presentation, the student will submit a written statement to be evaluated by the Director of the Center. LASC will retain copies of papers submitted for assessment. (for the rubric, see attachment)
New Program Information

Mission and Purpose

Describe the program and explain how it fits the institutional mission statement and planning priorities.

The Graduate Certificate Program in Latin American and Caribbean Studies (LACS) serves UMD's mission to "educate students and advance knowledge in areas of importance to the State, the nation, and the world." The mission of the Latin American Studies Center (LASC) is to promote and build a community of students and faculty that is interested in learning and actively engaging with Latin American and Caribbean history and culture. It provides a crucial network and central source of administrative, intellectual, and cultural support and inspiration for students and faculty throughout the university, as well as a strategic point of connection between UMD and the nation at large.

The core courses and colloquium, in particular, will ensure that students are trained to apply academic knowledge to real-life situations and to their own academic work, including their mentoring of LASC undergraduate students.

Program Characteristics

What are the educational objectives of the program?

The major objectives are to provide students with a textured understanding of Latin America and the Caribbean and to nurture an intellectual community informed about the subject.

The program is intended to support approximately 10-15 students per year drawing from the graduate population across the College of Arts and Humanities. LASC already has a sizable community of graduate students who are strongly engaged with LASC programming activities and who serve as mentors to LASC undergraduate students enrolled in the Undergraduate certificate and minor programs. The Graduate Certificate program is designed to serve that population and other students throughout the university who have an interest in the study of Latin America and the Caribbean.

While the Certificate program will be open to graduate students from all colleges, we expect that it will attract primarily students from the College of Arts and Humanities, the College of Behavioral and Social Sciences, the School of Public Policy, and the School of Public Health. The 12-credit Graduate Certificate program will provide graduate students with an opportunity for practical engagement and interrogation across disciplines and perspectives and the knowledge base to engage theoretically with a variety of issues. It will allow those from departments with an interest in the empirical study of the region to explore their interests and interrogate available data. It will also provide these students and those who theorize about Latin America and the Caribbean with an academic certification that would be important for their career objectives.

Describe any selective admissions policy or special criteria for students interested in this program.

Students who wish to apply for admission to the Certificate program in Latin American and Caribbean Studies must submit a C.V., official transcripts, and a statement of purpose (no longer than one page, single spaced). Any student currently enrolled in a Master's or Doctoral program within any department at the University of Maryland at College Park may apply to participate. Applications will be reviewed and approved on a rolling basis by an admissions committee consisting of three permanent members (the Director, the Assistant Director, and the postdoc) and two or three rotating members from the Advisory Board that changes every semester or academic year depending on their availability. In compliance with the standards established by the Maryland Higher Education Commission and the College Park Graduate Council Committee on Programs and Courses, admitted students must maintain a 3.0 GPA.

Summarize the factors that were considered in developing the proposed curriculum (such as recommendations of advisory or other groups, articulated workforce needs, standards set by disciplinary associations or specialized-accrediting groups, etc.).

One major factor influencing both the decision to establish a Graduate Certificate and the development of the proposed curriculum is the long-standing involvement of an interdisciplinary group of graduate students in the intellectual community and work of the Latin American Studies Center. These students, from a variety of departments and programs across the university, have, for at least the last six years, held meetings at LASC, organized Graduate student conferences on Latin American Studies, and, during the last two years, mentored Undergraduate students in an exemplary capstone program. With no certification to show for it, these students have voluntarily built an intellectual community that could further benefit from the rigor provided by a colloquium and a focused choice of classes, and allow them the benefit of adding to their vitae a Certificate acknowledging their commitment to intellectual interrogation of Latin America and the Caribbean. An intellectual community already exists. The certificate will build upon this and can be another tool in the recruitment and retention of Graduate students. (see attached document evidencing student involvement in the development of the Certificate proposal).

Course Descriptions:

Core 1: LACS608: Perspectives on Latin America and the Caribbean.

This course exposes students to major theoretical, disciplinary, and/or methodological approaches to Latin American and Caribbean studies as practiced in the arts and humanities, and/or the behavioral and social sciences, including history, literary studies, anthropology, and political science. Topics include racial, social, ethnic, and national identities, demographic mobility, and cultural, economic, political, and intellectual exchanges in the Americas.

Core 2: LACS648: Colloquium

A Colloquium that will ensure an ongoing intellectual community among students, faculty, and guest scholars. The director of the Center and students will meet to discuss readings and presentations by guest speakers. Students will also present their work for feedback. With the assistance of the Director, students are invited to play an essential role in the planning and structuring of the Colloquium. Every year the colloquium has a theme and will meet four times per semester.
Core 3:
LACS688: Concentration in Experiential Learning. 1-3 credits.
The concentration in experiential learning praxis may be of particular interest to students looking for an opportunity for practical work and experience outside academia. With approval of the Director, the experiential learning credits can be fulfilled with internships, the LASC undergraduate mentorship program, an applied research assistantship, or any program outside the University that is relevant. The three credits can be fulfilled in a span of more than one semester and can be a combination of the options. This concentration in experiential learning will be of particular value to students who are interested in pursuing careers outside academia. Examples of experiential learning might include internships at the Pan American Health Organization, the World Bank, or Casa de Maryland. With the approval of the director, students may satisfy this requirement by enrolling in relevant courses offered by or experiences supervised by LASC affiliate faculty and cross-listed with participating departments. In those cases, the affiliate faculty who act as the instructor of record will be responsible for providing adequate theoretical preparation for the student’s learning experience. Otherwise, the course/experience will be taught/supervised by the LASC director, who will be responsible for providing adequate theoretical preparation for the student’s learning experience.

LACS689: Concentration in Research Praxis. 1-3 credits.
The concentration in research praxis is intended primarily to serve students who are interested in academic research and teaching in Latin American and Caribbean studies by exposing them to a research experience supervised by an affiliate faculty member in Latin American and Caribbean studies. This might be a 3-credit intensive research seminar or independent studies tutorial involving a major research project or a 1-3 credit research assistantship in Latin American and Caribbean studies. Usually, students will satisfy this requirement by enrolling in relevant courses offered or research experiences supervised by LASC affiliate faculty and cross-listed with participating departments.

Traditional Semester

Identify specific actions and strategies that will be utilized to recruit and retain a diverse student body.
The Center will disseminate information about the Graduate Certificate via our faculty affiliates, who come from 22 different departments from across campus, and via our Graduate students who also come from diverse disciplinary backgrounds. The Graduate Student Collective is creating and distributing (electronically) a survey that will be used to gather and share information about the certificate. The Center will share information about the Certificate through our LISTSERV and at our events, and we will ask units from across campus to do the same. From Spring 2021, LASC intends to schedule the colloquium and other courses which will be part of a Graduate certificate when it is approved. This will inform students of the range of possibilities open to them.

Relationship to Other Units or Institutions

If a required or recommended course is offered by another department, discuss how the additional students will not unduly burden that department’s faculty and resources. Discuss any other potential impacts on another department, such as academic content that may significantly overlap with existing programs. Use space below for any comments. Otherwise, attach supporting correspondence.

While the program is capable of offering core courses, it assumes the willingness, participation and cooperation of already established programs, including, but not limited to Anthropology, Art History, Criminology, English, Geography, Government and Politics, History, LGBT studies, Theater and Performance Studies, Spanish and Portuguese, U.S. Latina/o Studies, Women’s Studies. Many of these departments are home to LASC affiliate faculty who teach courses with Latin American and/or Caribbean content that can support the elective and core requirements. At this time, the following departments (colleges) have made a commitment to support the core curriculum of the program on a rotational basis: SPAP (ARHU), ENGL/CMLT (ARHU), HIST (ARHU), ANTH (BSOS), and GVPT (BSOS). We are also in conversation with AASD (BSOS) and are confident that they will make a commitment in support of the program. The long term relationship with aforementioned programs will continue to be crucial to the formation of interdisciplinarity among our graduate students.

Accreditation and Licensure. Will the program need to be accredited? If so, indicate the accrediting agency. Also, indicate if students will expect to be licensed or certified in order to engage in or be successful in the program’s target occupation.
N.A. The program will not need special accreditation.

Describe any cooperative arrangements with other institutions or organizations that will be important for the success of this program.
N.A.

Faculty and Organization

Who will provide academic direction and oversight for the program? In an attachment, please indicate the faculty involved in the program. Include their titles, credentials, and courses they may teach for the program.
Merle Collins, LASC Director, in coordination with Eric Tomala, Assistant Director, will provide oversight. (See attachment for list of faculty).

Indicate who will provide the administrative coordination for the program
Eric Tomalá, Assistant Director, in consultation, where necessary, with the Director of the Program, Merle Collins.

Resource Needs and Sources

Each new program is required to have a library assessment prepared by the University Libraries in order to determine any new library resources that may be required. This assessment must be done by the University Libraries. Add as an attachment.

See attached.

Discuss the adequacy of physical facilities, infrastructure and instructional equipment.

The program will be housed in the Latin American Studies Center. Existing facilities in LASC will be adequate for the new graduate courses. We will make use of the LASC conference room for seminar-style meetings. Where necessary for larger gatherings, we will also use conference room facilities on the first floor of the Patterson building, where we are housed. This will continue a tradition of such use by LASC and other programs in the building.

Discuss the instructional resources (faculty, staff, and teaching assistants) that will be needed to cover new courses or needed additional sections of existing courses to be taught. Indicate the source of resources for covering these costs.

The courses for the Graduate Certificate will be staffed as follows:

LACS608: Perspectives on Latin America and the Caribbean. This course is to be offered every other semester. Staffing will initially come from LASC affiliate faculty in ARHU (SPAP, ENGL/CMLT, HIST) and several BSOS units on a rotational basis. It is our hope and expectation that other colleges and departments home to Certificate students will consider supporting the program by joining the rotational commitment.

LACS648: Colloquium on Latin America and the Caribbean. To be offered every semester, the colloquium will be taught by the LASC Director as part of his or her regular workload. The Director will at times invite speakers to make presentations. Invited speakers will generally be members of the LASC affiliate faculty or the larger UMD professoriate, as well as faculty members at other local institutions or visiting colleagues from Latin America and the Caribbean. Visiting speakers will offer an opportunity for constant contact with perspectives on Latin America and the Caribbean and encourage students to think in comparative perspective as they theorize.

LACS688 and LACS689: These courses will usually be cross-listed with courses, independent studies tutorials, research assistantships, and internships taught or directed by LASC affiliate faculty supervising a research capstone or practical learning experience. If the course is not cross-listed and supervised by a LASC affiliate faculty member, it will be taught or supervised by the LASC director.

Discuss the administrative and advising resources that will be needed for the program. Indicate the source of resources for covering these costs.

Students in the Graduate Certificate program will be advised by the Program Director and Assistant Director as part of their regular administrative duties.

The present LASC Director was appointed by the Dean of Arts and Humanities for a two-year term. Typically, the Director is appointed by the Dean of Arts and Humanities for a renewable three-year term.

This Certificate is interdisciplinary. Students come from a variety of departments across campus. While LASC provides a theoretical and other focus on a specific region of the Americas, the Certificate must depend upon the support of various ARHU departments. Faculty from some of these departments may be needed to supervise and/or advise about research projects. The attached letters of support from various ARHU departments and individual professors reflect departmental commitments.

Use the Maryland Higher Education Commission (MHEC) commission financial tables to describe the program’s financial plan for the next five years. See help bubble for financial table template. Use space below for any additional comments on program funding.

Reallocated Funds include an operating budget of $3250 for equipment, library, and other expenses (operational expenses) during the first year; the following years the program would utilize $1750 per year. The minor additional resources required to run this certificate will come from the budget LASC already has to support the two undergraduate academic programs (minor and certificate programs). All elective and core courses offered in the program are part of the faculty’s normal teaching obligation, with the majority either already offered as part of an existing degree program.

No tuition revenue is assumed because the certificate is only open to students who are already enrolled in a graduate (Master’s or Doctorate) degree program. Estimated revenues and expenses are included below. (see attached table).

Implications for the State (Additional Information Required by MHEC and the Board of Regents)

Explain how there is a compelling regional or statewide need for the program. Argument for need may be based on the need for the advancement of knowledge and/or societal needs, including the need for “expanding educational opportunities and choices for minority and educationally disadvantaged students at institutions of higher education.” Also, explain how need is consistent with the Maryland State Plan for Postsecondary Education (https://mhec.state.md.us/About/Documents/2017.2021%20Maryland%20State%20Plan%20for%20Higher%20Education.pdf).

Regionally and nationally, US demographics suggest that there has been an increase in the number of residents originating in Central America. According to a tabulation of data from the U.S. Census Bureau, pooled 2013-2017, 4.8 percent of the Washington Metropolitan area population, or 293,000 people, are Central Americans. In the environs of the University, there are Central American and other Latin American and Caribbean community organizations working with young people in need of language and other instruction. LASC Graduate students who currently meet at LASC and who mentor undergraduates, and undergraduate students who do internships, develop programs of support with these community organizations. A graduate Certificate will afford students the opportunity to engage theoretically and practically with communities in which they have both a research and an experiential interest. LASC is particularly well placed to help expand educational opportunities for students focusing on the histories and cultures of Latin American and Caribbean communities. By recognizing students’ practical interaction with and theoretical study about a diverse community within Maryland, with cultural and other connections to Latin America and the Caribbean, the certificate would both underline the university's commitment to diversity and inclusion and provide interested graduate students with an opportunity to understand communities and migration in historical and broader theoretical perspectives. The Certificate's focus on the study of Latin America and the wider Caribbean also expands choices for minority and educationally disadvantaged students not only at the University of Maryland but also in the K12 schools and other organizations with which they coordinate. This also provides students with ideas and opportunities for productive engagement with the community post-graduation, and directly engages with the Maryland State Plan for Postsecondary Education's emphasis on "foster(ing) innovation in all aspects of Maryland higher education to improve access and student success."

Is the proposed Post-Baccalaureate Certificate derived entirely from the core requirements of an existing master's degree program?

No

Present data and analysis projecting market demand and the availability of openings in a job market to be served by the new program. Possible sources of information include industry or disciplinary studies on job market, the USBLS Occupational Outlook Handbook (https://www.bls.gov/ooh/), or Maryland state Occupational and Industry Projections (http://www.dlr.state.md.us/imi/iandoproj/) over the next five years. Also, provide information on the existing supply of graduates in similar programs in the state (use MHEC's Office of Research and Policy Analysis webpage (http://mhec.maryland.gov/publications/Pages/research/) for Annual Reports on Enrollment by Program) and discuss how future demand for graduates will exceed the existing supply. As part of this analysis, indicate the anticipated number of students your program will graduate per year at steady state. It is expected that the students registering for the Graduate Certificate will come from a variety of disciplines throughout campus. That is the constituency that has frequented LASC throughout the years and that now works voluntarily mentoring undergraduate students. They may be expected to enter various positions in academia or to take advantage of their community engagement to become entrepreneurs and work with community organizations or in other occupations involving youth. Additionally, the Certificate holders will typically have both a second language and research knowledge of Caribbean and Latin American communities. According to the USBLS Occupational Outlook Handbook, "Employment of interpreters and translators is projected to grow 19 percent from 2018 to 2028, much faster than the average for all occupations. Globalization and large increases in the number of non-English-speaking people in the United States will drive employment growth. Job prospects should be best for those who have professional certification." Additionally, according to the same source, "Overall employment of post-secondary teachers is projected to grow 11 percent from 2018 to 2028, much faster than the average for all occupations. Enrollment at post-secondary institutions is expected to continue to rise. The majority of employment growth is likely to be in part-time positions." Importantly, the Certificate students might be expected to have good theoretical and practical knowledge of the communities and community institutions in the area in which the University is located, and so some ability to frame options for their careers.

Identify similar programs in the state. Discuss any differences between the proposed program and existing programs. Explain how your program will not result in an unreasonable duplication of an existing program (you can base this argument on program differences or market demand for graduates). The MHEC website can be used to find academic programs operating in the state: http://mhec.maryland.gov/institutions_training/pages/HEPrograms.aspx

The proposed Certificate program will be the first Graduate-level curriculum in Latin American and Caribbean studies in the state of Maryland. While many of our peers and nearly all of the Big 10 institutions have a Graduate certificate in Latin American or Latin American & Caribbean Studies, none has a comprehensive Latin American and Caribbean program like the one we propose here. In the D.C. area, only Georgetown and American Universities have Latin American and Caribbean Studies graduate certificates, and both emphasize diplomacy and governmental affairs. Our certificate will fill a (regional) gap in the breadth of the offerings.

Discuss the possible impact on Historically Black Institutions (HBIs) in the state. Will the program affect any existing programs at Maryland HBIs? Will the program impact the uniqueness or identity of a Maryland HBI?

The program is developed to add specific regional and theoretical perspectives to existing degree programs in the arts and humanities. It is also designed to cater to the specific interests of particular Latin American and Caribbean scholars, with a range of cultural and national interests. Consequently, the program will have no impact on high demand programs or the uniqueness and institutional identity of Historically Black Institutions. The program is unusual for bringing together related perspectives on diversity in Black communities and Latin American communities.

Latin American and Caribbean Studies Certificate Requirements and Worksheet

The Certificate is earned by successful completion of a 15-credit curriculum which includes the following courses and requirements:

(A) LASC 610 Introductory Course in Latin American and Caribbean Studies (3 credits). This course (to be cross-listed in the instructor’s home department) is designed to introduce students to current topics and critical issues in this diverse, complex, and rapidly changing field, with a special emphasis on approaches to Digital Studies as practiced by faculty and other experts here at UMD.

(B) Selected Topics in Latin American and Caribbean Studies (9 credits). Students are required to select three additional graduate courses in Latin American and Caribbean Studies from relevant course offerings throughout the University, subject to approval of the Program Coordinator. At least three of these credits must be at the 600 level. No more than six credits may be courses at the 400 level.

(C) Colloquium in Latin American and Caribbean Studies (1 credit for each of 3 semesters). Students are required to enroll in and attend the Colloquium in Latin American and Caribbean Studies (LASC 729) for three semesters (1 credit per semester; 3 credits total required). In addition, at least once during their time in the program, students working toward the Certificate must present to the Colloquium a paper or project in which Latin American or Caribbean scholarship or research figures prominently. The Colloquium is also open to all University of Maryland graduate students and faculty, not only those pursuing the Certificate.

(D) Language Requirement. In addition to English, student must demonstrate proficiency in one of the languages of the Americas. Proficiency may be certified through a language translation exam or through intermediate level coursework in the student’s indicated language.

(E) Minimum Grade Point Average. Students must earn a minimum grade point average of 3.0 in Certificate course requirements in order to be awarded the Graduate Certificate in Latin American and Caribbean Studies. The Colloquium, taken on a pass/fail basis, is excepted from this calculation.

To whom it may concern,

The Latin American Studies Center Graduate Student Collective supports the Latin American Studies Center's initiative to create a graduate certificate in Latin American and Caribbean Studies. The Certificate will strengthen graduate students professional formation and provide theoretical and methodological tools to problematize Latin America and the Caribbean from an interdisciplinary perspective.

It is our hope that the certificate will enhance interdisciplinary professional formation and further the center's mission to advance scholarship, art, and activism about Latin America and the Caribbean. Finally, we believe that the certificate will contribute to UMD’s efforts to enhance diversity and inclusion, and should be of interest to the various constituencies in our institutions.

Sincerely,

LASC Graduate Collective

To Whom It May Concern:

At a meeting of the Board of the Latin American Studies Center, we discussed the establishment of a LASC Graduate Certificate. We write to confirm that we agree to the establishment of such a Certificate. For the Graduate Certificate, students will be required to complete 15 credits. Continuing the critical and theoretical focus already extant in LASC, students enrolled in the graduate certificate will participate in a colloquium aimed at interrogating perspectives on Latin America and the Caribbean. Open to all interested faculty and students and reaching out to visiting scholars, the colloquium will account for a total of three credits over the course of the program. Additionally, students will register in core classes on Latin America and the Caribbean (6 credits), and elective coursework (6 credits) from a variety of courses and disciplines throughout the university.

As a member of the LASC Board, I fully support this initiative. Yours sincerely,

Ernesto Calvo

To the Programs, Curricula, & Courses Committee (and other relevant academic program and unit approval committees):

I am writing to express my strong support for the proposal by the Latin American Studies Center (LASC) for a Graduate Certificate Program in the Arts and Humanities. I believe that this is an exciting new curricular opportunity that will significantly benefit graduate students. I want to express my commitment to working with students through this program. I believe that LASC has long provided graduate students a space for interdisciplinary humanities and social science investigation. Such spaces at the university are in short supply, and I am excited to build on the cooperative relationship between the Department of History and LASC to add momentum to the certificate program and recognize the excellent work of LASC-affiliated graduate students.

Sincerely,

Professor Merle Collins

UMD

Dear Merle,

I am writing to strongly support LASC’s proposal for a Graduate Certificate Program at UMCP. This LASC certificate promises to provide an exciting new curricular opportunity, one that will be of interest and benefit to our students in Sociology and BSOS.

BSOS students have for years been part of programming at the Latin American and Caribbean Studies Center (LASC), and LASC facilitates coordination among students across a range of disciplines and cultures. The certificate will make it easier for our graduate students to study the literatures, cultures, politics, and economics of Latin America and the Caribbean. Furthermore, it will contribute to UMD's efforts to enhance diversity and inclusion, and should be of interest of broader to various constituencies in our institution.

As Professor and Chair of the Department of Sociology, and a LASC Board member, I would be pleased to see a LASC Graduate Certificate established to further the academic goals of a diverse group of students in our College and throughout the University.

Sincerely,

Dear Merle,

I hope you are well. As you know, I am on sabbatical this year in Lyon, France. Despite the world’s chaos at the moment, I’m enjoying my time away and the research and writing I have been able to do because of my two grants this year. Prof. Mary Ellen Scullen, now Head of FRIT, asked me to write to you as the specialist in Francophone Caribbean literatures in order to declare officially our department’s enthusiastic endorsement of the establishment of a Graduate Certificate in Latin American Studies. Yes, several of our students, certainly those who have worked with me, have benefited immensely from ties to LASC. I also have been affiliated with LASC since my arrival in 2006.

Since our popular graduate course on Caribbean Literatures in French, Spanish and English, which I jointly taught with Prof. Sandra Cypess (spring 2011), I have wanted to repeat the experience. I hope that we could think about developing such a course to offer regularly to graduate students working in French, Spanish, English and Comparative Literature. When I return, perhaps we can sit down and discuss this.

For now, though, please consider this letter as endorsing enthusiastically the affiliation of FRIT with LASC and our support for the Graduate Certificate you propose.

With warmest regards,

Prof. Merle Collins
Director of Latin American Studies Center
The University of Maryland,
College Park

Dear Prof. Collins:

I write with unreserved support for the Latin American Studies Center proposal to establish a graduate certificate in Latin American Studies. My support is informed by two factors, my work as a Caribbeanist and as a graduate advisor for students whose research addresses the Caribbean and the Latinx Diaspora. Concerning the latter, this certificate, if approved, will provide support for doctoral students who reside in other programs, but whose research requires an in-depth understanding of selected LAS territories. I can immediately think of four doctoral candidates in my program whose research would have and will be enhanced by the program of study you are proposing.

Such a program will, no doubt, add to the burgeoning intellectual community of scholars whose research focuses on LASC territories. If I understand correctly, the certificate will require that students participate in a 3-credit colloquium over the life of the 3-semester program. In my capacity as Caribbeanist, whose work centers issues of advocacy, citizenship, and development, should you, in the future, require faculty to present their on-going research in the colloquium, I am more than happy to do so. I wish you all the best and hope for a positive outcome.

Sincerely,

Dear Dean Bonnie Dill Thornton and Associate Deans,

I am writing to express my enthusiastic support for the establishment of a graduate certificate program in the Latin American Studies Center at the University of Maryland. I have been active with the Center since I arrived at UMD in 2007. I became a member of the advisory board in 2010 under the directorship of Karin Rosemblatt. I then served as the director of LASC from 2014-2017. I began this position in the era in which ARHU and the University cut funding completely for graduate student research after decades of previous support. Instead of losing interest, however, the graduate students’ active involvement with the Center began to increase markedly. Financial assistance is always crucial for graduate student research, but the building of community and scholarly support in other ways is also essential to their academic growth and security.

In response to the slashing of funding in 2014, the LASC staff began to develop programs to provide graduate student support in alternative ways – MA/PhD writing groups, conference organizing and paper presentation, mentorship opportunities, community and extra-curricular events, and so on. We collaborated actively with our affiliate faculty. The graduate students responded very positively to these things. They joined our newly formed “Graduate Student Committee” in increasing numbers and from a wide variety of colleges and departments (ARHU, BSOS, Education, Public Policy, Engineering), demonstrating to us that they wanted to stay connected to scholarship and to others doing research in and about Latin America and the Caribbean. Subsequent LASC directors, Dr. Britta Anderson and now, Dr. Merle Collins and assistant director, Mr. Eric Tomalá, have continued this project and have nurtured it even further with new offerings for both undergraduates and graduates. Student recruitment continues to grow. Much of this progress has been documented through the annual LASC director reports submitted to ARHU. Graduate student participation (alongside our amazing undergraduates) is also illustrated in our annual El Terrapino newsletter.

Graduate students and affiliate faculty have been asking LASC for the development of a certificate program for many years, so we know there is significant interest and dedication. I am very happy to see that Dr. Merle Collins and Mr. Eric Tomalá are taking the steps to make the graduate certificate a reality. The idea has been discussed at LASC faculty board meetings ever since (at least) 2014, and the proposal was unanimously approved at our fall 2019 board meeting. We, the LASC faculty, are all committed to help to make it successful. This would be a wonderful addition to the offerings of the Latin American Studies Center and the University of Maryland overall, and a graduate certificate would provide graduate students with an official notation and recognition of their expertise. This in turn, will help them gain meaningful employment after graduation and will increase the international exposure and reputation of the university.

The graduate students are already doing a significant amount of work towards the development of the Center’s community and towards our undergraduate programming and education through event participation and voluntary mentorship. They routinely offer public academic talks and workshops at UMD and take our classes to learn as much as they can. Through LASC, they are joining together to enhance their working knowledge of the history, culture, and language of the Latin American and Caribbean regions, as well as U.S. Latina/o/x cultures. The certificate would solidify and recognize this investment.

I am personally willing to teach one of the core foundational seminars for the certificate. I have been studying Latin America and the Caribbean for over 20 years, and I welcome the opportunity to give a graduate level seminar as part of the new LASC graduate certificate. I would also welcome students into my other graduate seminars to fulfill their elective credits, since many of the courses I teach have at least 60% of Latin American and Caribbean content.

If there are any questions about the validity of the LASC proposal or the certainly of its successful implementation, please do not hesitate to contact me at Lfred@umd.edu or (cell) 301-755-3301.

Best regards,

Dr. Laurie Frederik

Dear Eyda,

That's excellent news, and I'm very pleased to have it. I saw AP's comments and will bring them to the attention of the curriculum committee. Offering LACS608 jointly with a 400-level SPAP number should not be a problem. In fact, several other departments will be doing the same.

Thanks again for your support and best wishes,

Spap will commit to staff LASC 608, but at a 400/600 level, if that is an option. I am cc-ing both Fatemeh and Lauretta for their approval. Since there are still details that need to be worked out about courses, etc, I encourage you to reach out to my colleagues, especially Ana Patricia Rodríguez, who has a series of comments and questions.

Dear Eyda,

I don't know if you've had a chance yet to review the proposed curriculum for the Graduate Certificate program in Latin American and Caribbean Studies that has been circulated to the LASC community. (I also attach it here). The last time we corresponded about this, you informed me that SPAP was not ready to make a commitment in support of the program until you and your faculty have seen a draft of the curriculum. The committee that has been working on the proposed curriculum consisted of members of the LASC Graduate Student Collective, representatives of the Advisory Board, the LASC administrative leadership and the Dean's Office, as well as representatives of affiliate faculty whose departments have committed to supporting the program, which are HIST, ENGL/CMLT, ANTH, GVPT, and AASD. I am reaching out to you at this time to see if SPAP will participate in the Graduate Certificate program. Participation would entail a commitment to staff LACS608 on a rotational basis with the HIST, ENGL/CMLT, and the BSOS departments. That means that SPAP would have to staff the course approximately once every four years on load (i.e. as part of one of your LASC affiliate faculty members' regular teaching load in SPAP). If SPAP will participate, as I hope it will, I would need a brief email from you affirming such a commitment by Wednesday, September 2nd, which is the date that the PCC proposal will be circulated to the ARHU PCC committee.

Thank you for your consideration and best wishes,

Ralph

Dear Professor Collins,

The English Department is pleased to support the proposal of the Latin American Studies Center (LASC) to establish a graduate certificate in Latin American Studies. Currently, English and CMLT students participate in LASC and our students will benefit from such a certificate.

As part of its support for this proposal, English agrees to staff one LASC core course on a rotating basis (once every four years), beginning Spring 2021. Staffing would be conditional upon instructor availability and student enrollments (usually a minimum of 7 students for an undergraduate course or 5 students for a graduate course). The department may reassess this commitment after two cycles (in Spring 2029). English will also continue to cross-list courses with LASC, as we have done for a number of years, and to support students and faculty of both English and Comparative Literature who contribute in various ways to LASC programming and activities.

Sincerely,

Amanda Bailey

RE: Library Collection Assessment for Graduate Certificate in Latin American and Caribbean Studies

We are providing this assessment in response to a proposal by the Latin American and Caribbean Studies (LASC) Center in the College of Arts and Humanities, to create a graduate certificate in Latin American and Caribbean Studies. LASC asked the University of Maryland Libraries to assess our collection resources to determine how well the Libraries support the curriculum of this proposed program.

Latin American and Caribbean studies is an interdisciplinary field and the graduate certificate program in the LASC Center will focus on a range of disciplines including the study of literature, cultures, and the political, economic, and governmental systems of Latin America and the Caribbean. They will theorize about the postcolonial cultures of Latin America and the Caribbean, considering linguistic and other cultural and societal issues from comparative perspectives. Students will do so with knowledge of pre-colonial and post-colonial societies, and consider contemporary realities of Latin America and the Caribbean from informed regional and international perspectives.

Serial Publications

The University of Maryland Libraries currently subscribe to a large number of scholarly journals - most in online format—that publish articles in numerous disciplines that relate to the interdisciplinary nature of Latin American and Caribbean studies.

The Libraries subscribe to 3 of the top 5 ranked Latin American studies journals listed in the Area Studies category in the Social Sciences Edition of Journal Citation Reports.

These journals include the following, all of which are available online:

- Bulletin of Latin American Research
- Journal of Latin American Studies
- Latin American Perspectives

A fourth title is available through open access and linked from the Libraries catalog, WorldCat:

- Latin American Research Review
The fifth title to which the Libraries do not currently subscribe, Latin American Politics and Society, published by the School of International Studies at the University of Miami, is widely held in other libraries and available through interlibrary loan.

*Note: Journal Citation Reports is a tool for evaluating scholarly journals. It computes these evaluations from the relative number of citations compiled in the Science Citation Index and Social Sciences Citation Index database tools.

A search was completed in the University of Maryland’s WorldCat catalog for Latin American and Caribbean academic journal titles listed in the 27th edition of Magazines for Libraries published in 2019 by ProQuest, LLC. The University of Maryland Libraries subscribes to most of the titles online, either directly through publishers or through journal aggregator databases, or in print. In addition, the WorldCat UMD catalog provides links to the open access journals listed in the directory. The journals include:

- The Americas: A Quarterly Review of Latin American History (online subscription)
- Ancient Mesoamerica (online subscription)
- Cuadernos Hispanoamericanos (print subscription)
- Frontera Norte (link to open access through WorldCat)
- Hispanic Journal of Behavioral Sciences (online subscription)
- Hispanic Review (online through journal aggregator database)
- Historia Mexicana (link to open access through WorldCat)
- Latin American Indian Literatures Journal (print subscription)
- Latin American Literature Review (online through journal aggregator database)
- Letras Femeninas (print subscription)
- Luso-Brazilian Review (online subscription)
- Mexican Studies/Estudios Mexicanos (online through journal aggregator database)
- Revista de Crítica Literaria Latinoamericana (print subscription)
- Revista de Indias (link to open access through WorldCat)
- Revista de Occidente (print subscription)
- Revista Iberoamericana (online subscription)

*Note: Magazines for Libraries is a standard evaluative directory of core journals recommended for academic libraries.

Databases

The Libraries’ Database Finder (http://www.lib.umd.edu/dbfinder) resource offers online access to databases that provide indexing and access to scholarly journal articles and other information sources. Databases that provide access to materials relevant to the fields in the proposed program include but are not limited to:

- Academic Search Ultimate
- Art Abstracts
- ARTbibliographies Modern

- Chicano Database
- EconLit
- Ethnic Newswatch
- Film and Television Literature Index with Full Text

- Redalyc (Full text open access database of a selected number of mostly peer reviewed Spanish language, Latin American journals in the humanities, social sciences and sciences.
- SciELO (Full-text open access database of a selected number of peer reviewed Latin American journals. Coverage is primarily in the sciences but includes some coverage of the social sciences and humanities.)
- Sabin Americana
- SocIndex with Full Text
- Worldwide Political Science Abstracts

In many-and likely in most-cases, these databases offer full-text copies of the relevant documents. For journal articles and book chapters we own that are available only in print format, the Libraries will scan and send digital copies via email. For those documents we do not own, the Libraries will acquire them through Interlibrary Loan.

Monographs and Edited Book Collections

The Libraries regularly acquire scholarly monographs and edited book collections in Latin American and Caribbean studies. Titles not already part of the collection can usually be added upon request.

A search of the WorldCat UMD catalog was conducted, using a variety of relevant subject terms, both with Latin America and the Caribbean, and with specific countries. This investigation yielded sizable lists of citations of books that we own. Some examples include:

- Latin American and Caribbean art and architecture 733 titles
- Latin American and Caribbean economics 2,064 titles
- Latin American and Caribbean government and politics 3,130 titles
- Latin American and Caribbean history 5,682 titles
- Latin American and Caribbean language and literature 2,324 titles
- Latin American and Caribbean sociology and social issues 2,819 titles
- Argentina economics 445 titles
Brazil sociology and social issues 1,475 titles
Haiti history 871 titles
Mexico art and architecture 1,382 titles
Nicaragua government and politics 295 titles
Peru language and literature 359 titles

A further search revealed that the Libraries’ membership in the Big Ten Academic Alliance (BTAA) dramatically increases these holdings. These books, book chapters and essays, are quickly and easily available through Interlibrary Loan.

The Libraries continue to acquire new books, in electronic and print format. Much of this is accomplished through three book approval plans.

GOBI Library Solutions - This plan ensures that all materials fitting the Libraries’ profile, published in the United States are supplied, giving comprehensive coverage of all books published by university presses and a wide range of other publishers, including small presses. All major disciplines and area studies, including Latin America and the Caribbean are included. The profile also covers all modern languages, and especially Spanish and Portuguese books in the vernacular.

Latin American Bookstore – includes Latin American and Spanish imprints in the following areas: language, literature, literary studies, history, government and politics, human rights, women’s rights, sociology, environmental studies, education, anthropology, and archaeology. Approximately 230 books are acquired a year.

Susan Bach – includes Brazilian imprints in the following areas: language, literature, cinema, cultural studies, history, indigenous rights, gender studies, government and politics. Approximately 150 books are acquired a year.

Microform Collections

The University Libraries hold a number of major Microform collections in Latin American and Caribbean studies which offer rich primary source material. Below is a selection of these collections:

- Latin American History and Culture: An Archival Record. Series I, the Yale University Collection of Latin American Manuscripts
- Latin American history and Culture: An Archival Record. Series II (Cuban History and Culture) serials and printed materials from Harvard University.
- Latin American pamphlets from the Yale University Library
- Princeton University Latin American Pamphlets (Human Rights, Race, and Women)
- The North American Congress on Latin America (NACLA) Archive of Latin Americana (selected items)
- Slavery Tracts and Pamphlets from the West India Committee Collection
- Women’s Movement in Cuba 1898-1958: The Stoner Collection on Cuban Feminism
The UMD Libraries is a member of the Center for Research Libraries (CRL), a consortium of North American academic and independent research libraries. The consortium acquires and preserves newspapers, journals, documents, archives, and other traditional and digital resources for research and teaching and makes them available to member institutions through interlibrary loan. Among CRL's most important and unique holdings are extensive runs of several hundred newspapers published in Latin America and the Caribbean, dating from the colonial period to the present.

Interlibrary Loan Services

Interlibrary Loan https://www.lib.umd.edu/access/ill is a free service that enables UMD users to borrow books and obtain online articles and book chapters from materials not held in the University System of Maryland.

The article/chapter request service https://www.lib.umd.edu/access/ill-article-request scans and delivers journal articles and book chapters within three business days of the request--provided that the items are available in print on the UM Libraries' shelves or in microform. In the event that the requested article or chapter is not available on campus, the request will be automatically forwarded to the Interlibrary Loan service (ILL).

Additional Materials and Resources

In addition to serials, monographs and databases available through the University Libraries, students in the proposed program will have access to a wide range of media, datasets, software, and technology. Media in a variety of formats that can be utilized both on-site in McKeldin Library and via ELMS course media. GIS Datasets are available through the GIS Data Repository (https://www.lib.umd.edu/gis/data-and-resources) while statistical consulting and additional research support is available through the Research Commons (http://www.lib.umd.edu/rc) and technology support and services are available through the Terrapin Learning Commons (http://www.lib.umd.edu/tlc).

The subject specialist librarians for the discipline, Patricia Herron (herron@umd.edu) and Kelsey Corlett-Rivera (kcr1@umd.edu), also serve as an important resource to programs such as the one proposed. Subject specialists provide one-on-one research assistance online, in-person, or via the phone. They also provide information literacy instruction and collection development services.

Other Research Collections

Because of the University’s unique physical location near Washington D.C., Baltimore and Annapolis, University of Maryland students and faculty have access to some of the finest libraries, archives and research centers in the country vitally important for researchers in Latin American and Caribbean Studies. These include:

- Library of Congress, Hispanic Reading Room
- National Archives
- Organization of American States
- Pan American Health Organization
Conclusion

With our journal and book holdings and databases, as well as additional support services, such as interlibrary loan, the University of Maryland Libraries have the resources to support teaching and learning for the graduate certificate in Latin American and Caribbean studies. Our partnerships with BTAA and CRL, and our proximity to major Latin American and Caribbean library and archival collections and international organizations, adds to the wealth of resources available to students and researchers. As a result, our assessment is that the University of Maryland Libraries are able to meet the curricular and research needs of the proposed program.

Dear Will,

Thanks again for attending our meeting in June about the creation of a Graduate Certificate Program in Latin American and Caribbean Studies. The curriculum committee (which included Professor Isabella Alcaniz) has worked through the summer on finalizing the curriculum for the proposed program, and the PCC proposal was approved by the ARHU PCC committee yesterday. Before we go before the Senate PCC committee, I wanted to circle back to you in the hope that you might provide a brief statement of support for the proposed program (a simply reply to this email would suffice). I attach the PCC proposal here for your reference.

If you recall, in our meeting we made a proposal that one of the three participating BSOS departments (AASD, ANTH, and GVPT) would allow one of their LASC affiliate faculty members once every three years to teach the introductory course LACS608: "Perspectives on Latin America and the Caribbean" 'on load' (i.e. as part of the LASC affiliate faculty member's regular departmental teaching load). This means that, if the three BSOS departments rotate in this commitment, each BSOS department would have to staff the course once every nine years. Since our meeting in June, an additional ARHU department has made a commitment, which means that BSOS would have to staff the course only once every four years (thus, each rotating BSOS unit would have to staff the course once every twelve years).

As Associate Dean Wayne Macintosh has cycled off since our meeting in June, I have reached out to Associate Dean Jean McGloin (copied), who has expressed her support for the program and given me permission to reach out to you again.

Please let me know if you have any questions. Thanks again for your support and
